From the Amstredam Gazette, dated Oct. 12.

Naples, September 18.

THE arm'd Tartans and Ships which were sent from hence to Reggio, are returned with 36 Tartans laden with Corn and Oyl for this City. We continue to provide a great Number of Bombs, and Bullets, with store of other Ammunition, against the arrival of of the Fleet under Admiral Leake, whom we expect here after he has done at Minorca, where we have Intelligence he now is. A Felucca sent from hence to Sardinia, is come back with Dispatches from the Viceroy of that Island for Cardinal Grimani our Viceroy; who receiv'd on Wednesday last by a Courier the News of the taking of Fenestrelles, upon which the Illuminations and other publick Rejoycings which we were then making for the Reduction of the Island of Sardinia, were continued.

From the Paris Gazette, dated Oct. 13.

Madrid, Sept. 25. The last Letters from Catalonia are from the Camp of Castillon de Farfanna, where the Army is encamp'd, and from whence the Duke of Orleans caus'd several Forrages to be made till the 15th Instant far into the Country posses'd by the Enemy, without any Opposition. Some Days ago the Forragers approach'd San-Ramon, where was a Body of the Enemy's Horse, who did not stir out of their Intrenchments. The Regiment of Los Ninnos, or young Guards of the Prince, caus'd a Feast to be celebrated in the Church of St. Jerom, in Thanksgiving for his being happily entered into the 2d Year of his Age. The Patriarch of the Indies Officiated; and the King, the Queen, and the Prince honour'd the Feast with their Presence. The preceeding Evening there was an artificial Firework in the Square of Retiro, on the same Occasion. We have Advice from the Kingdom of Valencia, that the Marquis de Jamaica Viceroy of Sardinia arriv'd there the 10th of this Month, being set ashore on the Coast pursuant to the Capitulation, with all the Spanish Officers and others who would not stay on that Island. He touch'd at Barcelona, where the Archduke would have detain'd him, but Admiral Leake refus'd to deliver him up. There is at Valencia a great Train of Artillery, with Stores of Ammunition and Provisions for the Siege of Denia; for which nothing is wanting but the Arrival of some Battallions from Catalonia.

From the Camp of Castillon de Farfanna, Sept. 22. The 15th of this Month the Chevalier de Maulevrier march'd from the Camp of Agramont with a Detachment of 50 Men of every Battallion and 5 Troops of Horse, to dislodge the Miquelets out of the little Town of Alos, situate above Balaguer, where the Noguera-Pallaresa and the Segra joyn. The 16th the Duke of Orleans march'd from Agramont with the Army, and encamp'd at Mongay, two Leagues from Balaguer, where he had Notice in the Evening that the Chevalier de Maulevrier had posses'd himself of Alos. The Army halted the 17th, and his Royal Highness employ'd the Time in going to view Alos, where he found a great Quantity of Corn; and the Inhabitants, who at first had fled away, return'd. The Chevalier de Maulevrier had left there 300 Men, and was march'd on further to joyn the Count d'Estaing, who sent Advice to his Royal Highness that he had seiz'd the small Town of Ager situate on a Hill between the two Nogueras. The Duke sent Order to the Chevalier de Maulevrier to return, fearing he would be surrounded in the Mountains, and commanded M. d'Avary to Advance between Alos and Mongay, with a Body of Horse, to favour his Retreat. In the mean time he came and encamp'd with the Army on the Banks of the Segra, fixing his Right at Balaguer. The Head of his Troops were but just come to the Camp, when Notice was given that the Enemy had approach'd Agramont; which oblig'd him to return to Mongay. He mov'd from thence again the 19th, and came and encamp'd under Balaguer, having had Advice from M. d'Avary and the Chevalier de Maulevrier, who rejoyn'd him that Day with their Detachments. The 20th the Army pass'd the Segra and came to this Camp of Castillon de Farfanna, where his Royal Highness receiv'd Advice from the Count d'Estaing that he had forc'd the Bridge of Montannana on the Noguera-Ribagorçana, with no more Loss than of 8 Soldiers kill'd and 12 wounded; and that immediately thereupon some regular Troops who were in the little Town of Montannana, fled and sav'd themselves in the Mountains. By the taking of this Post, as also those of Ager and Alos, we are Masters of several Villages where the Troops will have good Winter Quarters. The 21st the Duke of Orleans went to take a view of Ager, where he has given Directions for making some Fortifications, as well as at Balaguer. The same Day he sent a strong Detachment of Foot to joyn the Count d'Estaing, who is order'd to attack the Town of Venasque, which is situate near the source of the Cinca, towards the upper Part of the Pyrenees, six or seven Leagues from St. Bertrand de Comenge, and 18 or 20 Leagues from Toulouse. So that the taking of this Place will render it very easie to open a commodious and short Communication with France. Within a Day or two, a Party of 20 Battallions which are in Balaguer, will be detach'd to the Kingdom of Valencia, to reinforce the Troops of the Chevalier d'Hasfelt and attack Denia. The Army will soon separate and be put into Winter Quarters. The Troops are at least as Numerous and make as good an Appearance as when they march'd to the Siege of Torrofa. We have just receiv'd an Account, that M. du Fort detach'd by the Count d'Estaing has intirely defeated a Detachment of 4000 Men of the Army of the Count de Staremberg; part of which were kill'd, and a Lieutenant-Collonel, a Major, 3 Captaine, 2 Lieutenants, 2 Ensigns, and 158 Soldiers taken.

I am credibly inform'd by Captain Crofts, who came last Night over from Ostend, that the Town of Lille is taken by Capitulation, but that the Citadel still holds out; but that that was to be storm'd on Saturday last: And he reports that this came by Express to Major General Erle's Tent half an hour before he left his Camp; which was on Saturday last in the Evening.

There are several Letters in Town, from Masters of the abovemention'd Transports; which say 'twas the current Report in Ostend on Saturday last before they came away, that Lille had capitulated.
